The British Neuropathological Society is pleased to announce a 3 day residential symposium to be hosted at Wye College, in the heart of the Kent countryside. The aim of the symposium is to bring together trainees in neuropathology, neurology, neurosurgery and young neuroscientists with international leaders in neuroscience research to allow exchange of ideas in an informal setting. Active participation of delegates will be strongly encouraged. The sessions are intended to range from basic neuroscience, through the application of neuroscience to understanding pathogenesis, to disease phenotypes and opportunities for intervention. The topics to be covered this year will be:

- Tau and neurodegeneration
- Stem cell biology
- Update on prion diseases
- Cerebrovasculature
- Pituitary
- Disorders of peripheral nerve

Cost will be £295 per delegate and will cover accommodation and meals (limited places available). Full details of the programme, the venue and registration forms will be available on the British Neuropathological Society website at:
